Author's Note

As a homeschooling family for 19 years, we used many different methods of lesson planning and record keeping, along with a multitude of different planners and worksheets. For the first few years of homeschooling, we found most of them to be too complicated with too many options. We actually made our days, and ourselves, more stressful and hectic because I (mom) was determined to fill out every page and fill in every line in every worksheet, even if it didn't quite fit the way we were homeschooling our children. It seems as if we spent more time planning than actually educating our kids, but we finally figured it out. We created a simple and basic planner which would allow us to schedule and keep track of lessons, as well as fulfill the record keeping requirements for our state. We needed something that was uncluttered; we wanted it neatly set up without a lot of extras that were unnecessary for our family. At the same time, we wanted it to be flexible enough that it would work with whatever curriculum and homeschooling method we would be using at any given time. We needed to be able to use one lesson planner for all of our kids. Lastly, we wanted our children to be able to use the same planner by themselves once they reached the age where they could manage and keep track of their schooling with little supervision. I usually gave them their own planner around age 10 (5th grade or so). Therefore this homeschool planner is suitable for use by both parents and students.

If you have enjoyed this publication and found it useful, we would be grateful if you would leave us a review.
Thank you.
